Annie Deremeik RD, LDN

Annie specializes in pediatric nutrition, including gastrointestinal disorders, poor growth and failure to thrive, weight management, and general wellness.

Annie's services are tailored to meet each client's personal goals based on his or her health history, medical condition and lifestyle. Whether diet modification is necessary to manage a specific medical diagnosis or maximize overall health and well-being, her extensive background in medical nutrition therapy for kids and adults allows her to guide individuals of all ages to optimal nutrition and well-being. She strives to provide her clients with the tools to feel their best every day through practical, evidence-based nutrition recommendations.

Annie is passionate about health and nutrition and believes a realistic plan including moderation and balance and a no-pressure approach are the keys to maintaining a nutritious and healthy lifestyle in today's fast-paced world. She has found working with infants, children, teens and their families especially rewarding. Helping parents navigate challenging but medically necessary diet restrictions and seeing kids grow and thrive continues to drive her passion.
